The Romance of Elaine - Sequel to "Exploits of Elaine"   ✕

"Train up this child for me, and I will give thee thy wages." Many other little scenes and incidents interwoven in, the story, are from life. "Well, see here, Lewie! Here is my lovely dolly, Lewie. "No, no, Lewie! "Why do you cry, Mammy?" she asked, "mamma has not scolded you to-day, has she?" "No, love." I am afraid I was rough then, I hope I did not hurt his little hand. Mammy, do you think mamma loves me any." "How could anybody help loving you, my darling!" "But, oh! Mammy, if I thought she would ever love me as she does Lewie! No, Mammy, I do not think she loves me; but how strange it is for a mother not to love her own little girl." "Well, darling, we will talk no more of that, or we shall be saying something naughty; we will both try and do our duty, and then God will bless us, and whatever our troubles and trials may be, let us go to Him with them all. Now, darling, I must leave you." "God is always by my side, isn't he Mammy?" "And how are the children?" "Why, to tell the truth, Agnes has been very naughty, and I have been obliged to shut her up." "Agnes naughty, and shut up again! "Why, what a sad litter they have made to be sure; I did not observe it before. "Ellen, do you think so?" "Oh, Ellen, what shall I do; oh, what shall I do! said Mammy, "she has cried herself to sleep." Come, darling, we will go." Puir, fulish, young things!" But Master Harry, bless you! "Well, I can hardly tell you, Bridget. "But how the father loved her, Mrs. "Well, aunty," said she, after stooping to kiss Agnes, "you are back sooner than I expected." "Yes, dear, I was obliged to hurry; little Lewie is very ill, I fear. "Why, mamma, are you going back there again?" asked Effie. How do you feel, Emily?" "Well, do put aside those books, dear: your health is the most important thing now. "Well, I'll be very good, aunty, and I've promised the boys to take a run with them over to the pond, and see them skate; and besides, we are all invited to an entertainment in a certain snow palace, which is nearly finished, and which I have promised to grace with my presence." they cried. she asked. "Yes, all made of snow," said Albert. "But don't let us tell her all about it, Bob; I want to surprise her." that's too bad, mother; it will spoil all our fun. Why, Aggy, how do you do? "I want to whisper to you, dear mother, one minute," said little Grace. asked her mother. asked her father; "because, if it will not, I suppose I must now go." "Oh no, papa, I will wait patiently" said Effie. "Cousin Emily" said Agnes, for she too said
